KLCN is concerned with the historic, current and future Aboriginal land uses as result of energy development and how our hunting, fishing, harvesting, recreation, education, spiritual, and sacred sites influence the project.

KLCN is concerned if current and future activities will be impacted as a result of increase in economic activities. What economic opportunities do the pipeline projects present?

KLCN is adamant that environmental monitoring by qualified Indigenous monitors be incorporated into energy development to help mitigate any potential impacts pre and post construction activities.

KLCN encourages combining scientific and traditional knowledge to better improve project assessment and mitigation in the planning of environmental and socio-economic assessment.

KLCN is concerned with ongoing cumulative effects as a result of accelerated oil, gas, forestry, mining and energy development within their territory.
